

Maria VALENTI – CV

She received the Ph. D degree in Mechanical Systems Engineering and the MSc Degree (cum laude) in Mechanical Engineering (Automation and Robotics) from the University of Napoli (Italy). She received Master in Business Administration Degree from the Stoà Business School (Italy). Between 1999 and 2008, she worked in Telecommunication Sector as Product Manager on value added services in mobile and fix communication in charge of coordinator of thematic working groups. Since 2009, she is a Researcher at ENEA| Energy Technologies Department, and since December 2018, she is leading the Smart Grid and Energy Network Laboratory. Her main research interests include: power systems design and control, micro-grids and smart grids application, energy performance analysis, concentrating solar power systems design. She has participated in several European Union and national projects. She is a reviewer for international journals and member of Scientific Committees. She supervised Master Thesis and International Fellowship programs. She is author of many scientific papers published in the proceedings of international conferences.